The Arthur M. Blank Family Foundation

Issue No. 8 November, 2011

Speaker Series: December 1, 2011

Americans have always believed that hard work and education open the doors to success. Is the promise still alive for today's generation of students? On December 1, 2011 (6 p.m. ET), The Arthur M. Blank Family Foundation Speaker Series will host "The Future of the America Dream." The sold-out program will also be available via live webcast. You can submit your questions and comments via Twitter. Join the conversation @BlankFoundation LIVE webcast on Future of the #AmericanDream http://bit.ly/ambdream. Read more.

Forward Promise Call for Ideas

Forward Promise - a new initiative from Robert Wood Johnson Foundation is seeking the best ideas to help young men of color succeed in life, school and work. If you submit an idea you will be invited to respond to a Call for Proposals early next year. Ideas due by 12/23/11. Visit http://bit.ly/ffpcfi for guidelines and to submit your idea.

Educated and Jobless

For the first time ever, there is now more student debt than credit card debt in America - to the tune of $829 billion in student loans. The average college student today has $24,000 in student debt, and many are without jobs they feel their degrees had guaranteed. Read more.

Can Preschool Help Children Escape Poverty?

Because children are most malleable during the first years of life, economists hypothesize early childhood interventions just might make the most difference in helping low-income children move beyond poverty. Read more.
